

Senator, Wool Vote Assailed, Offers to Quit

"Here are reputable papers, Republican papers, saying that this legislation was framed and is being jammed through this body by men who are legislating to put money in their own pockets. These Senators, whose names were printed in the editorial, have not seen fit to demand an investigation. I am unwilling that the incident shall be closed without our knowing whether it is true or not."

Gooding Mentions Rice

Senator Gooding demanded that Senator Caraway broaden the resolution to provide for investigation of Senator Caraway's vote for a duty on rice. Senator Caraway replied that neither he nor any of his relatives are interested in rice. When Senator Gooding asked how the Senate is to know that, Senator Caraway sharply replied: "If anybody said I was I would say that he is an unqualified liar. I do not legislate for myself."

"We will investigate and see why the Senator did vote for it, and why he has condemned every other schedule," shouted Senator Gooding.

"Investigate, investigate. The resolution is going to require me to disclose it, and it will require the Senator from Idaho to disclose his interest. I am willing to do it. I would not spurn the idea of trying to take money from somebody else to put in my pocket by legislation," Senator Caraway shouted back.

Bursum Denounces Editorial

Senator Bursum denounced "the unreliability, recklessness and malice" contained in one of the newspaper statements read by Senator Caraway. He said it was intended to "capitalise prejudice." He denied he was "one of the millionaires of this body."

Senator Odell, of Nevada, declared that while his name had been mentioned in an editorial which was read, he was not interested in any way whatever in sheep.

"It is ludicrous for a man to be a flock master, the lower end of a flock," said Senator Stanford. "If he is, should he then stand aside and permit an injustice to be done to the great industry in which he is interested?"

Senator Caraway pointed out that a judge who was interested would not be permitted to try a case.

In spite of the onslaught of Senator Caraway the Finance Committee was again sustained today in the votes on woven fabrics in the wool schedule. Paragraph 1,110, calling for a 2 per cent additional duty on goods cut for garments, was eliminated at the instance of the Finance Committee. Paragraph 1,111, on pile fabrics, was adopted, 33 to 16, with Senators Cummings and Keyes as the only Republicans voting no.

The paragraph on blankets was taken up and Senator Lenroot offered amendments for reductions from 5 to 15 per cent. Attempts to get a final vote on them failed for lack of a quorum. One test was 23 to 22 against the Lenroot reduction, but failed to develop a quorum.

"Young Astor's" Friend Makes Touch for Fifty

Poor Clerk Digs Up $36, but the Millionaire Fails to Return

A young man with a Palm Beach suit and black and white buckskin shoes walked into a National Grocery Store, at 235 Monticello Avenue, Jersey City, yesterday and bought several items of groceries.

As the packages were being wrapped a silk-shirted individual, who looked all the world like being enormously wealthy, opened the door and shouted to the other:

"Hurry, I've got to meet young Astor in thirty-five minutes and I'm late now."

As the first young man was about to leave the winked at the clerk.

"That bird's worth a million," he smiled as he left the store. And Walter Betz, the clerk, followed him to the door to get a good look at a real millionaire.

While Betz an hour later was still talking with his assistant how it must feel to be a millionaire instead of a grocery clerk who should bob into the store but the millionaire.

"Say, young fellow," he smiled, "I want to know if you'll be kind enough to lend me $50 till Monday. The girl in the office is home ill and she has the key to the box inside the safe."

Betz beamed with delight with the realization that a millionaire had come to him, a poor grocery clerk, for a loan. He couldn't dig up $50, but he did manage to shake $36 out of his pockets and those of his assistant.

After the millionaire had given both clerks two gold-tipped cigarettes he departed. He hasn't been back and Betz and the police—especially Betz—are trying to find him.

Quarantine Officers to Inspect Vessels Earlier

Freighters Will Be Boarded at 5 A. M. Under New Rules, Setting Sunrise Hour

New regulations promulgated by the United States Public Health Service set an official sunrise hour for boarding vessels in Quarantine under which cargo boats will be inspected at 5 a. m., standard time, and passenger vessels at 6 a. m., standard time. Hitherto it has been the custom to board cargo ships after all the passenger boats had been attended to, and the new ruling is therefore expected to save freighters much delay.

When the sun rises earlier than these hours, the regulations continue, sunrise will be considered to be at these times, and when it rises later the sunrise hour will be the time of the actual sunrise.

The boarding of all vessels arriving between the official sunrise and the official sunset, which is set at 6 p. m., standard time, or else the actual time of sunset if the sun goes down after 6 p. m., will be conducted as usual. All ships arriving between the official sunset and 8 p. m., standard time, will be boarded upon request, if such request is made not later than 6 p. m. of the same day, the right being reserved to reject such requests if circumstances demand. No boarding will be done after 8 p. m. unless the vessel is in distress.

Fists Fly At "No More War" Parade

kins, of "The Labor Age," Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch, Edward C. N. Richards and Clarence Howell.

Pamphlets were distributed declaring that the World War cost 10,000,000 lives and $136,000,000,000, that war meant death, famine and pestilence, that universal disarmament was necessary and that schools should be built instead of battleships. Placards with similar inscriptions were carried. All the marchers wore red hearts made of paper in their hats.

From The Tribune's Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The "no more war" agitation of the National Council for the Reduction of Armaments brought forth a vigorous protest from Vincent D. Costello, Post of the American Legion here to-day, when placards bearing the three words were placed alongside memorial markers to Washington's soldier dead in the parking bordering Sixteenth Street.

William F. Franklin, commander of the post, vigorously complained to the police against the council's action, and Chief Sullivan directed the organization to remove the posters immediately. Protest also was filed by relatives of Delbert Reeves, who was killed in France, and the request was made that the placard be removed. A brother of Reeves said that the council showed a "thoughtless disregard for the dead in promoting propaganda."

"It is true," declared Commander Franklin in protesting to the police, "that most of the boys who were killed in the war died in the belief that there would be no more war and sacrificed their lives to this end. But the space around the markers is sacred ground. These people are commercializing the dead in their work to be heard in their campaign for 'no more war.'"

The National Council to-day raised a huge "No More War" banner over its headquarters. The three words were set in an unbroken circle of the flags of all nations. The council also sent the following message to President Harding:

"The National Council for Reduction of Armaments congratulates you upon the positive steps taken thus far in the interests of the peace of the world. We assure you of our support in making further steps in this direction, and express the hope that as next steps an international economic conference may be called by yourself in the near future, that this government may recognize the world court at The Hague and that the way be paved ultimately for the outlawry of war by international agreement."

Breaks Back Diving Into Shallow Water

Accident at Steeplechase Due to Different Depths on Sides of Jetty

Simon Schulm, fifteen years old, and his friend, Benjamin Swedish, walked out on a jetty at Steeplechase Beach, Coney Island, yesterday to do some diving, and did not take into consideration the fact that the water on one side of the jetty was two or three feet deeper than on the other.

Simon walked ahead of Benjamin and called back for his companion to "watch this dive." Benjamin watched Coney Island, yesterday to do some diving, and did not take into consideration the fact that the water on one side of the jetty was two or three feet deeper than on the other.

Simon dived from the shallow water side, and plunged into two feet of water. He struck the bottom and bathers ran to him. He was unable to speak and only partly conscious.

An examination revealed that he had a broken back. He was taken to Coney Island Hospital. His recovery is doubtful. Simon's home is at 301 Berry Street, Brooklyn, and Benjamin lives at 252 Berry Street.

Woman Struck by Fusillade From Cab, Assaultants Escape

"After Me for Some Time," Says Victim; Driver Tells of Touring Streets With Revolver Pressed to Back

Mrs. Bridget Grosso, of 328 West Houston Street, while at the corner of West Houston and Greenwich streets late last night, was struck by one of several bullets fired from a taxicab that moved swiftly past the corner.

She was taken to St. Vincent's Hospital, and is said to have remarked there that "they've been after me for some time."

The shots were fired by two men standing in the machine. There were two other men and a woman in the car besides the driver. The taxi disappeared through West Houston Street after it had been chased for some distance by Patrolman Charles Crum, of Motor Cycle Squad No. 1. He gave up the pursuit after firing several shots.

A short time later, William H. Smith, who said he was the driver of the machine from which the bullets were fired, called at Police Headquarters and told of his experience with the four men and the woman.

He said they had engaged his car at Canal and Varick streets, and he drove them to 45 Perry Street. He then took the thorough various other streets, going first in one direction and then another, and most of the time he felt the pressure of a revolver muzzle at his back.

Detectives of the Charles Street station, after hearing Smith's recital, rode with him over the route he had traversed with the woman and four men.

Half an hour after the shooting a man, who said he was George Kahel, of 1044 Second Avenue, walked into New York Hospital and applied for treatment for a gunshot wound. He said he had been shot in the arm at Greenwich and Houston streets.

Only 25 P. C. of Victims Are Females, Says Health Report; Auto Greatest Life Destroyer

A report made yesterday to Acting Health Commissioner Frank J. Monaghan by Dr. Shirley Wynne, of the commissioner's office, shows that 75 per cent of deaths from accidents in New York are among the male population.

The report says: "The most important cause of accidental death from a numerical standpoint is the automobile. During 1921 849 persons were killed this way. This is equivalent to a ratio of almost 15 per 100,000 of the population and represents a net increase of 1 per 100,000 since 1910."

"The greatest number of fatalities from street accidents occurred between 3 o'clock in the afternoon and 6 in the evening."
